Can you set up Google Chrome and use Incognito Mode?

If you search while signed into your Google account it impacts things, but using Incognito mode will resolve that.

Chrome here <https://www.google.com/intl/en/chrome/browser/>

Once installed...

Open an incognito window

1. Click the Chrome menu  on the browser toolbar.
2. Select New incognito window.
3. A new window will open with the incognito icon  in the corner.

You can also use the keyboard shortcuts Ctrl+Shift+N (Windows, Linux, and Chrome OS) and ⌘-Shift+N (Mac) to open an incognito window.

Mr. Epstein,

We currently have two negatives on first page in Google but one is at 6th and the other at 7th. (Universal search, no history applied). Results will be very different if that PC has been used to click or search any of the results and has not been cleared.

How did you pull the results you just sent?

Using Google Chrome + Incognito Mode + Clearing Browser Cache = only reliable reporting. I can help set you up with this. Screenshot here of results using above method - <http://i.imgur.com/tfGN3Zj.png>. This is the true representation of what your average searcher will find (statistically, most searches will be from users whom have not clicked on your negative articles before)

Much progress has been made since we spoke - premium placements are getting secured over next week, hundreds of links have been built to your primary sites and the first movements are kicking in today (NYMag moved up to 4th a few hours ago). We still have confidence we are on the right track and doing everything we can to get this cleaned up - another 45 days should be enough to have a clean first page based on what has been done.

PS - The foundation site was just hacked and I'm in the process of fixing that today. You can actually see it in the screenshot above (it reads Cash Advance advertisement in the short-description). This is something a previous company deployed but we are now going through and securing the rest of the domains to prevent basic hijacks like this.

I'm free on my cell for next few hours. [REDACTED]

Sincerely,

Tyler Shears
